

jsFiddle Example: AngularJS Directives for Dynamic Form Configuration

Posted At : July 29, 2014 1:40 PM | Posted By : Jon Hartmann

Related Categories: AngularJS, Examples & Tutorials, Javascript

Here I show how you can use a directive to generate form elements by using dynamic scope references. Its not amazing and probably not even the best way to do this, but it works.

This is a middle stage of an example I'll post later of switching the UI completely to set options on different objects.

Start with a boilerplate:

Close

- jQuery
- Vue
- React
- React + JSX
- Preact
- TypeScript