While I'm a CF programmer, I'm really interested in facilitating user experiences, and that has invariably led me to a love of Javascript. Now Aptana has announced a really spiffy server called Jaxer that allows you to run JS on the server side and have it automatically synced to the client side. Its pretty wild stuff. You can read more about it here.

As soon as this is out for IIS, I'll be all over it.
